

Guide to the first 2 weeks with your new dog

Congratulations on the new addition to your family! With a little work and some planning, your new dog will be a well-behaved companion for years to come. Be sure to teach good manners and habits from the first day you bring your new puppy or dog home. If you follow these simple guidelines, your dog's settling into your home will be a piece of cake for both you and your new best friend.

1. Teach your new dog the rules of your house from the beginning. When your dog first gets home, he or she may be a little confused and unsure of the new living situation. Even though your home is no doubt comfortable, it is different than where your dog came from, and different can be stressful. It is important to remember dogs do not speak our language and will best understand your expectations through training and management. Training and management should begin the very moment your new dog arrives in your home.

You might feel you need to give your new friend a few days to unwind and adjust before imposing rules. While you may mean well, this delaying of training has the potential to be both frustrating and damaging. Right from the very first day, it is crucial to convey your expectations to the dog and to start training. If you do this, your dog will succeed in learning house rules right from the beginning. If you change the house rules a few days after your dog has arrived, he will not understand why things have changed. Your dog may have already formed new habits and will have a difficult time adjusting to yet another set of rules. It is much better to begin teaching your dog everything you would like him or her to know from the very first day.

2. Try not to overwhelm your new dog with too much activity during this initial adjustment period (each dog's adjustment period will vary). It is very exciting to have a new dog. Of course you want to introduce her to all of your friends and family and of course you want to take your new pal everywhere! All this excitement however could be very stressful for your dog. Please keep in mind that even in the best of situations your dog's world was probably limited to a handful of environments and activities. It is best for your dog to spend the first couple of weeks quietly settling in and getting to know you with brief and frequent outings to meet new people and continue the socialization process. In the beginning, limit introductions to just a few visitors at a time. If your dog has time to become familiar with you and your home surroundings, she will be more confident when setting out on adventures beyond your immediate neighborhood.

3. Keep your new dog either safely confined with appropriate chew toys, or supervised at all times. This is the best way to keep your new friend (and house!) out of trouble when you are unable to monitor his actions. Your dog requires a dog-proof, safe place: a "doggie den" or crate -the equivalent of a toddler's playpen- where he can rest and chew appropriate items in your absence. There are many options for your "doggie den," but a crate or small room in your house is ideal. Initially when your dog is loose in the house or yard you must be around to gently direct your dog to an appropriate activity if he chooses an inappropriate one. If you are careful about supervising your dog and showing him what you expect, your dog will learn to settle down quietly, to chew only appropriate chew toys and eventually be trusted in the house in your absence.

-DO immediately show your dog to his/her appropriate toilet area.

-DO take your dog to the toilet area once an hour, every hour, on leash (except overnight). Allow supervised free time only after he relieves himself in the toilet area. If your dog does not go to the bathroom on one of these trips, confine him to his "doggie den" OR keep him on leash and supervised, until the next scheduled potty break.

Guide to the First 2 Weeks with your New DOG

-DO confine your dog to a “doggie den” whenever you are physically (or mentally!) absent. Such as when you are at work, paying bills, making dinner, sleeping, etc.

-DO feed your dog some of his/her measured amount of food out of a hollow Kong or other food toy stuffed with kibble and snacks throughout the day, especially when she in her “doggie den” or when you are busy. Also use part of your dog’s daily amount of food while on walks, during training or when meeting new people. Feeding your dog in his or her “doggie den” is also a great way to make it truly home.

-DO provide plenty of appropriate chew toys to keep your dog busy and prevent chewing “casualties” in your home and yard. Redirect any chewing “mistakes” by directing your dog to an acceptable chew toy. This will also help establish a good chewing habit for the lifetime of your dog.

-DO introduce your dog to new people and other pets gradually so as not to overwhelm him. Use kibble and treats to help form a positive association to new people. Be sure he has access to his “den” in case he needs a break from all the activity.

-DO enroll in a basic training class right away! This will help you to understand how to better communicate with your dog in a way she will understand.

-DO look for a Pet Dog Trainer that uses positive reinforcement/reward training methods (just ask what methods they use).

-DON’T allow your dog free run of the entire house right away, or else your new friend may learn all sorts of bad habits. First take the time to teach him good habits.

-DON’T take your dog off-leash in public until you have successfully completed an obedience class and have built a strong positive relationship with him.
